COLLEGE PLANNING

How to Find the Schools that Fit

When it comes time to choose potential colleges, the number of resources can be overwhelming. While guidance counselors, family members, friends, and teachers are all great sources of information, you'll also want to expand your search to consider schools that might be less familiar to those in your immediate circle. Here are some tips:

1. Search online using tools such as Counselor-O-Matic.
2. Sign up for our Recruiter Service and get school suggestions that match your profile.
3. Visit schools to determine which qualities you want in a school and which you don't.
4. Review the rankings, especially those driven by student-opinion, like the Best 366 Colleges.
5. Think about what you want to study in college and find schools that offer your desired major(s).

ADMISSIONS TIP

Rolling Admissions

Still finalizing your college list? Many high school seniors are still adding and dropping schools from their lists. If you're one of them, we can help. We pulled together schools that offer rolling admission or have application deadlines that haven't yet passed.

All are still accepting applications for the Fall 2008 term. Some are included in our Best series of books, some offer specially tailored degrees in specific fields and some offer you a broad-based liberal arts education.
